Lunar Lexon 570

ANDREW JENKINSON reviews an old favourite in Lunar's touring range - with one or two improvements for 2018

THE LEXON name has been around for many years and it was a bit of a groundbreaker in its day, bringing a 7ft 6in width to UK caravans, offering loads of living space. The Lexon's width is no longer a talking point but the caravan still gathers a loyal following. Last year the model range had a sunroof added and black front locker panel, though this has reverted to white for this season.

However, with new graphics, a refreshed front panel and satin-styled grab handles this Lexon looks good. Its interior has also had a few alterations, making it very agreeable.

There's plenty of light with the front sunroof

Step inside the 570 and this single-axle model offers the usual spacious ambience of a Lunar tourer. The lounge has plenty of natural light flooding in the large side and front windows and sunroof. There is also Lunar's Maxi roof skylight with its LED integral lighting, complementing the LED corner spots and overhead locker lighting. There's a central chest of drawers, seat base access flaps, alarm sensor and an easy-to-make up double bed with pull-out frame. Seat comfort is excellent and I liked the extra front lockers either side of the sunroof. The lounge

The Lexon's kitchen is well-appointed will seat four in comfort and comes with bolster cushions and trendy scatter cushions.

The side kitchen offers a full oven, Dometic fridge, microwave (situated above the sink) plus Thetford Aspire 42-litre oven with dual-fuel hob. Worktop space isn't bad but the extension flap is a useful addition. Good storage space is provided with cupboards and overhead lockers while a small side cupboard opposite gives even more.

It's well planned out and practical with LED lighting for night illumination. The wardrobe boasts three drawers and a show cupboard plus a small side cupboard with space for a TV.

Twin single beds are easy to climb into, not being set too high, and the mattresses look and feel comfy. There's storage space in the bed bases with exterior access. Overhead lockers also add to storage, with good depth for bulkier items. LED spot lights are provided along with a shelf by each bed and the overhead lockers also have integral lighting. Rear washrooms have always been a strong point for Lunar and the Lexon 570 continues this trend. A Thetford toilet and a side window are fitted, plus a well-equipped shower cubicle of a good practical size. The deep hand basin has storage beneath and LED lighting around the mirror. There's also a Mini Heki rooflight here, so allowing further light and ventilation into the washroom. ⚡

A comfortable tourer for two, the 570 is hard to beat - light, well equipped, spacious and well-planned.
